

Deep learning is a subset of machine learning that uses neural networks with many layers. These systems learn hierarchical representations of data, useful for image recognition and natural language understanding.